

ABSTRACT

The invention refers to a multi-functional lever consisting of a basic lever for a first actuating function and with at least one lever element branching off from the basic lever for a second actuating function, in which the lever element forms a subassembly with the basic lever or is connected to the basic lever.